The screenshot shows the GitHub profile of Ahyoung Ryu. The profile includes a profile picture, the name 'Ahyoung Ryu', and the bio 'AhyoungRyu'. It also shows the user's affiliation with 'ZeppelinX', location 'Seoul, Korea', and the date they joined GitHub 'Dec 3, 2014'. The 'Organizations' section lists 'zeppelin'. The 'Popular repositories' section displays four repositories: 'zeppelin' (Forked from apache/zeppelin, Mirror of Apache Zeppelin, 0 stars, Java), 'blog' (0 stars, CSS), 'spark-notebook-example' (This repository is a test for ZeppelinHub Viewer, 0 stars), and 'gitlabhq' (Forked from gitlabhq/gitlabhq, GitLab is version control for your server, 0 stars, Ruby). The 'spark' repository is also listed (Forked from apache/spark, Mirror of Apache Spark, 0 stars, Scala). The 'Contributions' section shows a heatmap of 818 contributions in the last year, with a 'Contribution settings' dropdown. The 'Contribution activity' section shows a 'Jump to' dropdown set to '2016', with a list of years from 2014 to 2016. The bottom of the page shows a summary of activity: 'Created 15 commits in 2 repositories'.

Dear Ahyoung Ryu,

The Apache Zeppelin Project Management Committee (PMC)

hereby offers you committer privileges to the project.
These privileges are offered on the understanding that you'll use them reasonably and with common sense. We like to work on trust
rather than unnecessary constraints.

Being a committer enables you to more easily make changes without needing to go through the patch
submission process.

Being a committer does not require you to participate any more than you already do. It does tend to make one even more committed. You will probably find that you spend more time here.

Of course, you can decline and instead remain as a contributor, participating as you do now.

This link: <https://community.apache.org/contributors>
might help you understand more about becoming committer.

1. 아이콘 하나만 바꾸는것도 하나의 contribution이 될 수있겠지?

2. 아무도 아직 안건들고 있는 틈새시장을 노려볼까..

3. Stay Involved

While talking with a few different users, I have been seeing the use case of using iterative development in Notebooks or Spark Shell and then copying and pasting the final solution to a formal application repeating itself very often.

I was wondering if an "Export Spark Paragraphs as a Spark Application (jar)" would be a feature that Zeppelin community would think it's useful. But keep in mind there are some limitation here : we would be constrained to Spark related paragraphs, etc... but even so, I think there are multiple scenarios where I see that the ability to have an application that directly runs on Spark to be very useful.

If the community is interested, let's use this thread to discuss any specific requirements or suggestions that others might have, and after a few days I would like to start prototyping this functionality.

Thoughts ?

Luciano, I think this would be a terrific feature. I've heard the exact same workflow you've describe in all of the research we've done.
